Explanation
This map displays critical habitat areas and their boundaries, which are designated by the State of Connecticut for the conservation of endangered and threatened species. The map is intended to help developers, planners, and landowners understand the potential impacts on state-listed species and the need to conduct an Environmental Assessment (EA) before proceeding with any proposed project within or adjacent to these boundaries. If the project's impacts are determined to be significant, further environmental analysis and mitigation measures may be required. The map is based on the best available data and is subject to change as new information becomes available.

Data Sources
- SED Map Data: Based on data originally from the State of Connecticut Department of Energy & Environmental Protection, natural resource inventories, and land use data. The data is updated periodically based on new information and field observations.
- Digital Data: The Digital Data set includes all the map information as of the current publication date.
