Explaination
This map depicts general locations of state and federal listed species and the result of comprehensive or site-specific field protection, private conservation groups and the scientific species and critical habitats based on data collected by the Natural Diversity Data Base. The map is intended to be printed at its original scale and included to serve as a pre-screening tool to determine the potential listed species and critical habitats. The map is intended to be a broad indication of the areas of interest. Most detailed information is available through the Connecticut Department of Energy and Environmental Protection's Natural Diversity Data Base Digital Data. (DEEP) http://cteco.uconn.edu to more precisely search for and locate the project boundaries and any additional affected areas. Visit the DEEP website (www.ct.gov/deep/gis) for this map and a variety of others. For more information about state-listed species, contact the CTECO Interactive Map Viewers at www.cteco.uconn.edu. Data Sources
DEEP MAP DATA - Based on data originally from the New England Atlas of Biological Diversity, 1:200,000 scale, published by the New England Fish and Wildlife Coordination Council. The atlas is a publication series that provides biological data on selected aquatic ecosystems of the New England states and information on how to use the data. The DEEP map information is neither current nor complete.
